Shane's Shots

Viewpoints from the Editor's Desk

By Shane Matzen

Hard Court Herald Editor

It's that time again where we as basketball coaches begin to make our summer plans. For "civilians," that means calling the travel agent and picking which day to fly out on and how much suntan lotion to pack. For us, it means deciding whether to go the league-route, shootouts, camps, open gyms, or a combination of these activities and others. Hasn't the shootout trend become a tremendous thing for our teams and us? For a small amount of money, you can get several games and not be committed to a lengthy time period. There are several shootouts and camps listed in this issue for you to choose from. Just a personal note on this topic: the Blue Storm Shootout at Southwestern Illinois College in Belleville, IL is a tremendous value. We get to see each summer six new teams from a variety of states and the cost is very low.

After a drawn-out and some would say convoluted process, we have a new head men's basketball coach at the University of Missouri. Our executive secretary Gary Filbert has given high marks to Mike Anderson after having had the chance to meet him shortly after his hiring and again in Indianapolis at the Final Four. Much of what went on with the previous regime in Columbia (regardless of who you consider at fault) left those in the basketball world in Missouri splintered and feeling much like a rudderless ship. As a former manager for Coach Stewart and thus an ardent Tiger fan, I'm excited about what Coach Anderson brings. He's risen from the ranks of unpaid volunteer assistant to what many consider the figurehead of hoops in our state. I think given the path he's taken to get here to Missouri, he will be extremely cognizant of the job we do as coaches regardless of what level or position we hold. I hope you will join me in welcoming him to Missouri.

It would be misguided of me to not mention our coach at Missouri State within this article. Barry Hinson was kind enough to spend a few moments with me at the Class 4/5 Final Four discussing our newsletter. He agreed to be the subject for this edition's Q&A article. I think you will find his answers to my questions both interesting and informative. Coach Hinson did a great job this year with his team and is to be congratulated on not only this season but for setting up what looks to be a bright future for the Bears in Springfield.

I have had two instances in the past few seasons where I felt like a character from the movie "Goodfellas." When John David Pattillo took his Poplar Bluff Mules to their first Final Four under his leadership, I remarked to him that I felt like Ray Liotta or Robert DeNiro to his Joe Pesci when Pesci became a "made man" in the movie. That is, it was nice to know that someone I knew who was a good friend and a contemporary of mine had finally done it: made it to the Final Four. This year, it was with great happiness I was able to see another peer of mine mark this career achievement. Randy Kriewall of Kirkwood led his Pioneers to Columbia and a good showing in bringing home the 3rd Place trophy.

Earlier this month, Randy announced that he was leaving the coaching ranks. As I started thinking about Randy's decade-plus at Kirkwood as head coach and assistant, one main thing stuck out in my mind. That thing wasn't the great wins he had and the interesting ways you had to game-plan and prepare for his teams. Rather, it was the fact that when I coached against Randy it was almost as if he and I were coaching the game together, rather than against each other. I like to think that I have the best interest of my players at heart off the court before what we do on it, but it was ALWAYS obvious Randy did. In a district title game against Chaminade and the great David Lee several years ago, Randy and his staff walked onto the floor in Hawaiian shirts just to keep his team loose. (I always joked with him that I was offended when he played against us and didn't have the print shirt on that we weren't a big game for them!) Each season, Randy sets up what he called "70s Night at the Gym" and came out onto the court in a leisure suit (see picture below—Randy is 2nd from left). These were the obvious things that he did that made the game fun, but you could see it in the former players that came back to Kirkwood to see their coach and in the gracious manner Randy treated you win or lose after a game.

Those of us who have not been fortunate enough to get to the big show in Columbia I suppose will keep on pushing to hopefully someday sit on the floor rather than up in the corner of Mizzou Arena. I know it's that rock that I keep trying to push up the hill regardless of how many times it keeps falling back on me and knocking me down. However, guys like Randy Kriewall give me hope, help me keep it in perspective and remember why we do what we do.

Lastly, please take a look at the "Suggested Reading" section of the "Coaches' Clipboard" in this edition of the Herald. Listed there is a manual on the High-Low Offense made popular by Bill Self put together by a current high school coach in Georgia—Jim Waite. Jim does a tremendous job of laying things out so it can be used by programs from those with built-in talent to burn and the little school with limited height, skill or ability. He was able to spend over the course of several seasons while Self was both at Illinois and Kansas a week or so each year taking notes, asking questions and generally soaking in all the nuances of the offense and putting them to use with his own high school teams.

I wish you all the best in your summer endeavors. Just don't forget: if you win a lot of games this summer you're setting the tone for the upcoming season. If you happen to be on the wrong end of the scores, you're taking a look at the kids and trying different things in preparation for when the scores really count! It's all how you look at things....

Q&A With the Difference-Makers

In this edition of The Hard Court Herald's Q&A we spoke with the head coach of the Missouri State Bears, Barry Hinson. Coach Hinson has recently completed his sixth season at the helm of the Bears and in the process led his team to the NIT quarterfinals against perennial-power Louisville. We asked Coach Hinson several questions which we hope will hit home with high school coaches around Missouri.

Hard Court Herald: As you recruit across the Midwest and nation, how would you put Missouri high school basketball in the context of how it is played elsewhere?

Barry Hinson: I think the style of play is similar in the Midwest with most states. I don't see a big change unless you head to the east or west coast. I think we are very fortunate to have such competent coaches here in the state of Missouri. As you can tell by our roster, we have elected to recruit the majority of our players from the state because of this very reason.

HCH: Recruiting has become a nation-wide endeavor for college basketball teams across the country regardless of size, conference affiliation, etc. In your tenure at MSU, you have had good chunk of your roster filled by native Missourians. Has that been something that has "just happened" or something that you set out as a priority from day one?

BH: On the very first day of my job I announced at my press conference that we would make Missouri a recruiting priority. As you can tell by our roster, we have done so. It is my job to recruit the very best basketball player that also fits our system. We have been fortunate to have that type of student-athlete available in our state.

HCH: This question has been asked to both of our previous interview subjects, but it's always interesting to see how different coaches in the college ranks react. What are things you look at in a high school player that make you say to yourself: "This kid has been taught well by his high school coach?"

BH: There are several things that I watch for in a student-athlete whether it is in practice or in a game. For example, how does he react to coaching, adversity, and success? I've always been a big believer in reading body language. When I go to watch a game, I focus on the individual and no one else. From the moment he touches the floor for warm-ups to introductions, and substituting in and out of the game. I look at all of his reactions.

HCH: While you have practiced at this writer's gym several years ago and yours truly picked up a couple of great drills we still use with my team...have you had the occasion to see something at a high school practice while recruiting that opened your eyes and made you say to yourself "We need to be doing that?" And, if so, would you share an idea or two you may have implemented at the college level?

BH: I've not attended one practice that I haven't picked up something to bring back to our team. It could be a drill, a quote, an observation, or something as simple as a logo design or school motto. One of my favorite things I picked up at a high school practice was at the end of every pick up game, before the team could win, they had to make a free throw. If they missed, the game continued until they could make a free throw.

HCH: What role do you see that you must play serving as the coach of Missouri State University in the context of being a true representative of basketball in Missouri?

BH: My role never changes. I am a coach, teacher, confidant, father, friend, advisor, etc... I've always told my players and their families fifteen years from now I could care less whether they could make a jump shot. What I do care about is are they a better father, better husband, better citizen and that they achieved graduation for I know it will last them the rest of their life.

HCH: High school coaching has become more and more a full-time, year-long job for those who wish to pursue excellence in it (a far cry from the days of taking the basketballs out in October and putting them up in February). The time constraints make balancing coaching and family time tougher and tougher with this evolution. As a coach in the major college basketball ranks and having this situation be a given for you, what are some words of advice for our coaches who are wanting to be a leader of young men AND a great husband and father?

BH: In the last ten years, with the creation of the Internet, chat rooms, message boards and sports talk radio our jobs as coaches have taken on a greater challenge. It is simply glorification or vilification and no in between. I truly believe that teachers/coaches can and will have the most impact on our society. With that being said, I have often spoken out loud they should be paid as such. It is my opinion teachers/coaches are far under paid and under appreciated. I am reminded by a quote from Arnold Palmer "It's nice to be important, but it's more important to be nice".

3. Assistant Director Garner encouraged MBCA members to work with their Administrators in matters concerning MSHSAA potential policy changes. These include the shortening of the Basketball season and the use of three officials for state and regular scheduled games. He also encouraged members of the MSHSAA Advisory Committee to be prepared with MBCA positions for the meeting in April 2006.(MBCA Board Members Shane Matzen, Crag Parrack & Ray Steinoff are Advisory committee members)
4. Members present were ask to look at the report, which were handed out, of the MBCA March 11, 2006 Board Meeting. Secretary Filbert reviewed the items mentioned in the report from the October 16, 2005 report. In addition the Treasurer's report of February 23, 2006 was handed out.

5. The 2006 Clinic report made discussed and members were encouraged to volunteer for the various jobs.
6. Board members were reminded that the Hall of Fame games are scheduled for June 30, 2006.
7. Secretary Filbert reported that 37 boys and 27 girls had been nominated for MBCA Academic All State. Several nominations had been received but for various reasons had not been added to the list. The reasons included being nominated by non-members, not meeting the criteria and lack of official transcripts. The date for the event is Sunday May 7, 2006. The MO Sports Hall of Fame will be the presenting sponsor and President and CEO Jerald Andrews will be the speaker. Their sponsorship amount is $3000.00. This will allow for a better meal and should help the Association break even. At this point the Show-Me State Games Scholarship $500.00 awards will go to Mackenzie Stirmlinger of St. Joseph's Academy and Alex Moosman of St. Francis Borgia.

MBCA SCHOLAR-ATHLETES OF THE YEAR:

Alex Moosman
St. Francis Borgia

Mackenzie Stirmlinger
St. Joseph's Academy

Wrapping things up.....

The 2006 MBCA Academic All-State Banquet will be held at the Reynolds Center on the campus of the University of Missouri-Columbia on Sunday, May 7 at 1pm. Jerold Andrews of the Missouri Sports Hall of Fame in Springfield will be the keynote speaker. The MSHOF is serving as the sponsor for this year's event to the tune of a generous $3000 donation. Also to be recognized for their part in the proceedings is the Show-Me State Games. The SMSG is for the second straight year donating $500 each to the Scholar-Athletes of the Year for their use in furthering their education.

To qualify for Academic All-State, the student-athletes listed in the pages prior all were successful in attaining the following achievements: score at least a 27 on the ACT (or equal on the SAT or PSAT), maintain at least a 3.25 GPA, start at least 90% or play in 75% of the quarters of his/her games and maintain good moral character and display good citizenship.

In addition to the Academic All-Staters listed above, the Richard Fairchild Memorial Coaches of the Year will be honored (you can find a listing of the winners in the MBCA All-State Teams). The MBCA Coach of the Year award is named in memory of Richard Fairchild, the long-time coach at Chillicothe High School. Richard, during his long tenure, coached both the boys and girls teams at CHS. His boys team won the 1981 State Title in Class 3A. His girls team finished second in 1994 in Class 3A. Rich served two terms as President of MBCA and for thirteen years was the Basketball Commissioner of the Show-Me State Games.

The 2006 Mr. & Miss Show-Me Basketball Award winners will be announced at the banquet as well. The highest honor in Missouri high school basketball will join a list of elite athletes. That list of past recipients can be found at the end of this newsletter. Also, the top contributors to Special Olympics basketball will be recognized as Mr. & Ms. SOMO Basketball for 2005-2006.

Ron Zetcher, one of the most acclaimed college officials ever hailing from our state, will be presented with an award at the May 7th ceremony. For his contributions to basketball in Missouri, Ron will have bestowed upon him the Carrie Francke Award.

This year's class of inductees into the Missouri Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame will be honored at the annual MBCA Hall of Fame All-Star Games. The proceedings will be held once again at the Hammons Student Center on the Missouri State University campus on Friday, June 30th.

Finally, plans are in place to hold the inaugural MBCA Coaches Clinic this fall at Columbia College. An open letter to the membership was sent out via e-mail recently, but a copy of it from our executive secretary Gary Filbert follows in this newsletter.

Dear MBCA membership,

I am pleased to bring to you the news of an exciting development with our association. On Thursday-Friday, October 19-20, 2006 we will be holding the 1st Annual MBCA Coaches Clinic. While we have been involved with clinics in the past, this will be the first conducted solely by the MBCA.

Columbia College in Columbia will be the site for our clinic. The Southwell Complex has been recently enlarged and renovated and will serve as an ideal site to hold what we think will be a comprehensive way for you to further your basketball expertise. Within the building you will have the chance at any one time during the clinic to be in the "speaker gymnasium" where a college coach (we are in negotiations at the present to secure a Division I coaches [men's and women's] with Final Four experience) or panel group will be speaking. Meanwhile, in the main gym, a college team of the opposite gender to the speaker/panel will be conducting practice. Between the two sites, you will have a chance to look over the latest in basketball technology, equipment, uniforms, etc as we hope to have a vendor roster to rival any other clinic you have attended in the past. The list of items that we hope will be attractive to you as a coach include:

- Top-notch college coaches and teams from all levels (men and women) speaking and practicing*
- Extensive vendor site provided for your convenience*
- Meal provided on-site at Columbia College*
- T-shirt to each coach in attendance*
- Hospitality Room provided at the clinic hotel (TBA)*
- MSHSAA rules meeting provided*

We think the ability to bring all of these things to you all at one site (with the exception of the hotel and hospitality room) gives you one of the best opportunities to further yourself as a coach you will ever encounter.

While the groundwork has been laid for the clinic, the MBCA can still use your help. If you have ideas or connections to speakers, vendors, sponsors, etc. please direct them to me at my e-mail address (show4games@aol.com) or give me a call (573-442-2567). I will make the official contact to these persons or entities as the official representative of the MBCA. We can also use any other help or ideas you can provide.

We as an association are extremely excited about this opportunity we have to make coaching basketball in this state a special endeavor. I hope you will join us and take advantage of that opportunity.

*Yours in hoops,
Gary Filbert
Executive Secretary*
