The Little Things

by Jason Wolfard

Hard Court Herald Associate Editor

Lindbergh High School

I was fortunate enough this past season to take my team to the Final Four in Columbia. Although the games didn't end up the way we wanted to, the experience was amazing. I know there are coaches out there that haven't been able to experience the Final Four and there are also retired coaches that never got there. I've been to many clinics over the years where they have a state championship panel of coaches. One thing that seems to always come up during this discussion is that they were blessed with great athletes. In our case this year, I didn't have the star player or any D1 players. What I did have is a team that did the "little things" that helped us reach our goal. I thought I would take this opportunity to just share some of the things I learned with this team that I thought made the difference in us getting to Columbia. Here is what I learned this season (hopefully some of it will help some of you with your future teams):

- "Think Big" – this was a slogan I started with my team when I first got the job three years ago. After I was named the head coach, the first meeting I had with all of the players at all levels involved me simply giving them a piece of paper. The paper had a picture of the Mizzou Arena floor in the middle and in big letters at the top it simply said, "Think Big". I knew at the time that it was going to take a ton of work to get to that point and it wouldn't happen that year and probably not even the next. But the group of seniors I had this year were still freshmen at the time. It started as how we looked at what we wanted to do. That was the point where we started to believe in the big picture. That has been the goal of my current seniors since the end of their freshman year.
- Set goals early – At our banquet last year, the players and parents walked into the room and saw signs hanging around the room that had the number 32 on them. I got this idea from when I was a senior in high school. At our banquet at the end of our junior year, our coach told us that there were 33 games until the state championship. We started believing it along with all of our parents as well, and we were fortunate enough to get to the state championship and play 33 games. I decided to use that again, but didn't realize how much it would coincide with other things. What did happen though at that moment is that the returning players and their parents started believing that we would play 32 games next year and get to the state tournament. It then worked out that our approach to each game is that we would use 32 minutes of pressure. Later in the season, we began to use a defense that really helped us and we called it our "32" defense. The one thing about setting this goal of playing 32 games is that no matter what troubles we went through during the season (and believe me there were several) we could always re-focus on our goal of 32.

Every game we would count down from 32 knowing that we wanted to get all the way down to one game remaining. Seems kind of silly at first, but now that I have used it twice and it has worked both times, I am a believer.

- Belief Is Powerful – In late January into early February there was a stretch of games that we lost six of seven games. One of those games saw us surrender a good lead with very little time remaining and lose, while another game was one where we lost our chance to win our conference outright. After those two games, I was starting to question if we were simply crazy in thinking we could accomplish this goal. After talking to a couple of colleagues, I talked to our coaching staff and told them that we had to view it as a new challenge to get our kids to believe again that we could do this. There were several key factors, but the one that I think made the difference was when we won a very important road game on a last second shot after surrendering another big lead. From that point on, I could see it in my players' eyes. They believed they could beat anyone no matter what the odds. They never panicked or doubted that we could achieve our goal. During the playoffs when you never know if that is your last practice or not, we never got that feeling. Everyone on our team simply knew that we would be back to keep on practicing. Of the four teams that were in Columbia, three of them had D1 players and great talent. We didn't have a single D1 player or anyone who had been offered anything yet. The one thing we did have though that got us there was belief, and that made all the difference.
- Find other ways to prepare – during our last four games, we were still in the running to win our first conference championship in 25 years. That was one of our small goals. Although I knew that was important to our guys, I wanted to also start getting them ready to focus on what it would take to get to Columbia. At the time we already knew our district seeding. It would take four wins to get to Columbia and achieve our goal, so I used our last four regular season games as a practice bracket. By winning our bracket we would achieve our goal of winning conference. To me though, by winning this practice bracket we gained the confidence that we needed to win four games and get to Columbia. When it came to district time, I took the same approach and drew a mini-bracket on the board every game just like we did at the end of the regular season.
- Go ahead and call us lucky – Two thoughts come to mind when it comes to people calling us lucky. First off, luck often favors the winner. Secondly, my father always told me that luck is when preparation meets opportunity. We had heard it all season long... "You guys have the good path to Columbia". We won our district championship game on a last second three-point bank shot. The team we beat in the quarterfinals upset the defending state champion the round before. The one word that seemed to follow us around was "luck". My goal was to get my players to believe they belonged in the situation they were in. I looked at it in reference to the two thoughts above. First off, we had to win four games to achieve our goal. The team that gets lucky is usually the team that wins, so I looked at it as I would rather win than lose even if it meant being lucky. Secondly, one thing I constantly told my players is that we had prepared all season long for the opportunities we had in front of us to get to Columbia. If people wanted to call us lucky or “Cinderella”, that was fine with us. My players believed that our preparation gave us the opportunity to achieve our goal.

- Enjoy the experience – we went to Columbia with a goal of winning our school’s first state championship in basketball in the school’s history. Unfortunately for use we ran into a team the first round that was pretty athletic and good. Although the outcome of both games was not what we had hoped, none of us would trade in those three days for anything. The things I will always remember from that trip was our last practice on Thursday night (probably our most focused and best practice of the season), sitting in the locker room with my players before the game and just watching them prepare for the game, being in the locker room and hearing our fans roar as our team took the court the first time, seeing the smiles on the guys faces when their names were announced before the first game, sharing our last moments in some great reflections instead of horrible disappointment and also knowing that I was able to coach a team who took on the definition of a team more than any other one I had been involved with or seen.

I’m not sure if any of this will help some of you get to the Final Four, but I do know that the reason we got to the Final Four was not because of extraordinary talent, but because of the little things that my players and coaching staff did. I hope you can take even just one thing out of this and use it to get to Columbia during your career. As I told my players after our quarterfinal win, it will be something that they would remember for the rest of their lives. Good luck to all of you as you start to prepare for next season and as usual if there is anything you would like us to discuss or write about in future issues, please email Shane or me (lindberghoops@sbcglobal.net) and let us know. Congratulations to all of you on your season and I’m sure I will see many of you this summer!

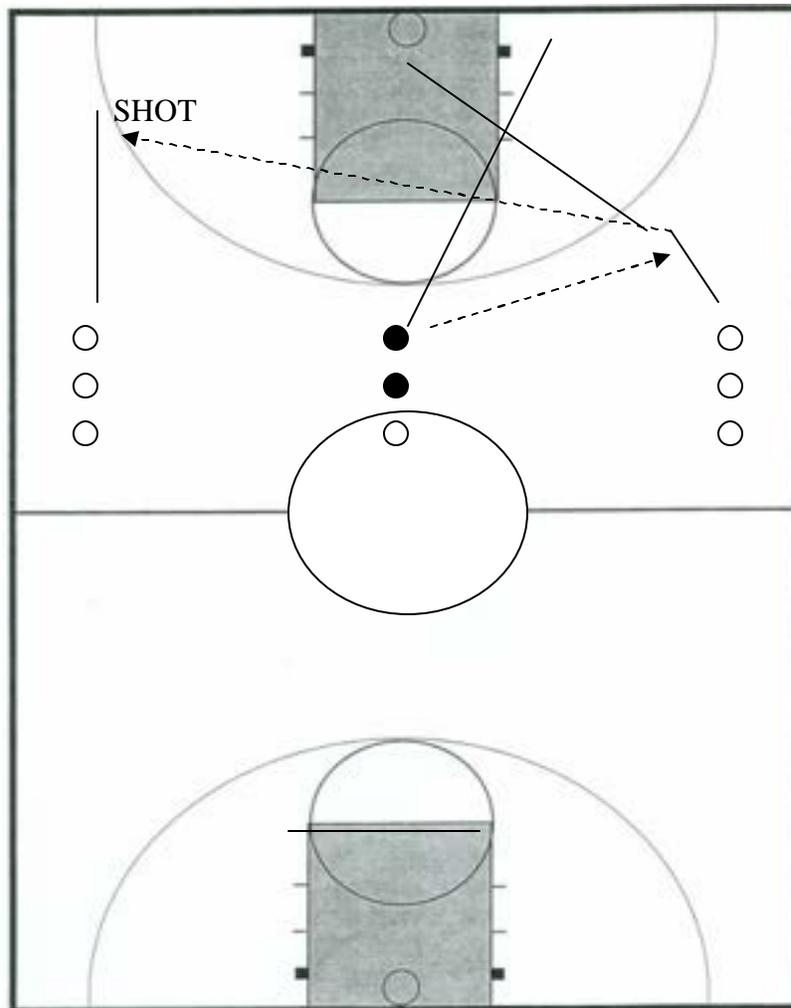

Practice Drill of the Month

"45 in 4"

○ = PLAYER

● = PLAYER WITH A BALL

This is a good competitive shooting drill. It is basically a three man weave (two passes). After the second pass, the player will shoot a three-pointer and the other two will crash the boards for an offensive rebound. If the three-point shot is made the team gets one point. If it is missed but the other two players (or the shooter) catch it before it hits the ground and put it back in on one try, then the team gets one point. Once the first shot goes up, the next ball will start. The goal is very simple...get 45 points (made shots) in 4 minutes. Toward the end of the season, we would up it to 50 in 4. This is a good drill to use at the beginning of practice to get loose or to end a practice with.

If you have any questions OR if you have a practice drill you would like to share with members of the MBCA then send an email to lindberghoops@sbcglobal.net.

Q&A with the Difference-Makers

Jeff Sherman
Central Methodist University

Coach Jeff Sherman has recently completed his 22nd season as head coach of the Runnin' Eagles which makes him the longest tenured head coach in CMU's 100 year history passing the legendary C.A. Clingenpeel this season. In 1994, Sherman surpassed Ken Ash as the All-Time winningest Coach at CMU with 383 victories. Highlights of Sherman's tenure include three conference titles, seven 20+ win seasons (including a 30-7 finish in 1994). The Eagles have qualified for the NAIA Division II National Tournament twice (1994 and 1998). The Eagles have been NAIA top 25 nationally-ranked in nine different seasons under Sherman's direction, with the 1997-1998 team holding CMU's highest national ranking of #2 in the country. The Eagles led the nation in scoring in 1990-1991 averaging over 106 points per game and runner-up the following year racking up with a 102 points per game average.

During the past 20 seasons, Sherman's program has produced 15 players that have scored over 1000 career points, 39 players making post season honors, and ten players selected as NAIA All-Americans. Fast breaks, up-tempo offense and pressure defense are all staples of the Runnin' Eagle system.

Hard Court Herald: As a member of one of your first recruiting classes back in 1986, it's hard for me to believe you're wrapping up your 22nd season at Central Methodist. What are your thoughts on being able to obtain longevity in this business?

Jeff Sherman: Wow! Has it been that long and are you really that old? I think there are many factors that may lead to parts of my longevity the most important being that you love what you do. I don't think I ever really thought of doing anything else and when you can wake up each morning and look forward to going into work I think the rest takes care of itself. However, in this profession, it obviously takes more than just loving what you do to keep your job or to have success. I have been most fortunate to work with so many wonderful and talented student athletes and intelligent and gifted assistant coaches. Those factors, along with an extremely supportive and caring wife and family had made this commitment possible. Central Methodist University has been an instrumental institution with our mission and goals for our students to be able to succeed on and off the court in and out of school. The faculty and administration have been wonderful to work with. In other words, I have been most proud to be an employee of Central Methodist University and responsible of heading our men's basketball program.

I think it is also important to have your goals and objectives of what you are trying to accomplish. I think there are many differences between high school and college. Our success doesn't just come down to our win/loss record that particular season, but how well we help prepare our young gentlemen to be successful throughout their lifetime. From the results we have had over the past couple of decades, I think we are doing a very nice job. But don't get me wrong, it still comes more often than not your wins vs. losses. Stability has allowed me to stray from this in some regards and schedule one of the strongest NAIA schedules each season with at least two NCAA Division I teams and a couple of NCAA Division II teams to challenge our players and program. This gives our players the complete package when they choose to attend CMU and prepares us to be the best possible team we can be.

HCH: There are a lot of young coaches out there nowadays who have a tremendous amount of enthusiasm for our profession but who are calling it quits sooner rather than later. What are some factors you've been able to observe that might account for what seems to be a growing lack of "long-timers" in the coaching field?

JS: I think some of this may come down to asking themselves, "Why am I in this profession and what are my overall objectives and goals for what I want to accomplish?" I think many younger coaches put too much burden and emphasis on how many games they win. Some programs are obviously better programs tradition-wise and it may take years for a young coach to build a program with the same type of success and tradition, however, the patience doesn't match the intent. Of course, patience isn't something that many administrations or board members seem to have either. I know this is a trying and demanding job to have. Many find out they really enjoy the coaching aspect, but the other demands that are required out of the position are too much to handle compared with most other jobs.

Many of the obvious reasons why people get out of our coaching profession include: Lack of pay for hours worked; pressure from administration and community; lack of talent to do what one's ideal philosophy might be; hard to deal with parents and their lack of vision for what is best; time away from family; not wanting to teach classes all day; It is difficult to get involved in other activities in the community, extra pressure due to media and TV, etc, etc... I just think if one truly loves this job, you accept the good with the bad. Hopefully, there are a lot more good times than bad. However, with the growing number of coaches that leave the profession early, there may be many concerns coming up we haven't faced before.

HCH: Keeping on the subject of young coaches, many set out immediate goals of getting into the college ranks. What advice do you have for those with such a dream?

JS: I think a good choice would be to try and get on as a graduate assistant somewhere early in one's career when it is easier to do so. This isn't easy since there are so few GA positions and college jobs in general and you will need to sacrifice a decent salary which makes it difficult to do when you have a family. The bottom line is you need to get in the door somehow. Even if it were a volunteer coach, most colleges want college experience which is basically recruiting, handling budgets, travel and scheduling along with handling a different type of student athlete and the needs of these individuals. I think other ideas are to help at basketball camps starting as young as you can. Do it for nothing to get in the door and if you do a great job you will always be asked back or later wanted to be a part of someone's coaching staff.

There are some major differences in regards to coaching high school and college, but the basketball knowledge part isn't always what most people look for. I guess it is taken that everyone already has the knowledge of the game but more importantly, what else can you bring to the program? Recruiting has taken over as a top priority in the college ranks. So, if one really wants to end up in college, the more years you coach in high school doesn't necessary lead to college opportunity. I hate to say it, but the game is shifting to younger coaches that like to travel and work very long hours. It is extremely tough on families. Most college coaching positions are not head coaching positions so one must be talented in a number of areas to compliment the coaching staff. Head coaching wins and losses doesn't necessarily mean that you fit into a particular coaching staff when applying for a position. Sometimes it is helpful to know someone that can help get in the door. (I guess, however, we can say this about a lot of things.)

HCH: You have always been a proponent of up-tempo basketball. Can you expand on why this is the style of play that you have kept as a staple of CMU Runnin' Eagle basketball?

JS: Fast breaks, multiple and pressure trapping defenses are components of CMU Basketball and are fun to coach and players enjoy playing in this style of play. The other part is the fans love to watch this style of play when it is done correctly. Believe me, there are a lot of styles that try to accomplish this and you don't know what you are watching. I think it is very important when you play this style that you have the personnel that will match the system. This is a very rewarding style of play, but very demanding. I have always enjoyed the up-tempo style. There have been a few years where we didn't emphasize it as much as others but for the most part, we have recruited the personnel that fits this style of play...more importantly, players that want to play in this style. You have to have good depth for this to work as you can't be successful unless everyone is willing to accept their role. The fast break components are what the game has come to and what makes it exciting to coach, play and watch.

I think that the NAIA level focus is more on guard play than post play for obvious reasons. It is very difficult to find the player that can dominate the inside on our level that leads to team success. However, if you look at the best teams across the country they most likely have the finest guards. We are consistently one of the top three-point shooting teams in the country over the many years and this is a result of our up-tempo style to get better shot selections. If you play the up tempo game correctly, you are attacking the basket at all times with penetration or post play which allows the outside game to come into play. You know you really have something when it all comes together. If you are not a good rebounding team, the up tempo style of play can become disastrous. If you have a smaller team though, it is possible to have a better offensive rebounding team with the up-tempo style of.

HCH: It has been my impression that many players in the metro areas that might be tremendous candidates for NAIA basketball bypass the chance to attend and play at some of the great smaller institutions in our state. What are some reasons that you might convey to the coaches in our association as to why this needs to be an option for their players?

JS: Status is big in just about anything we do. This is also involved with where one decides to play their collegiate ball. Division I has preoccupied everyone's hopes and dreams. You don't see many kids sitting around when they are kids wishing to play ball for a NCAA Division II, III or NAIA school. They are the programs they see on TV. The same may also apply with coaching and other positions. I think a lot of this also falls on coaches wanting their players to go to the bigger schools to make their own programs look good or better than others. Having a player play on the Division I level from your particular program is a big deal (even if it really isn't in the best interest of the individual sometimes.) Can this person be successful over the course of their career? Will they have an opportunity to play, to graduate, etc?

I also don't believe that many coaches have taken time to watch a lot of small college basketball to relay the information to their players. We get very few freshmen that play a lot of minutes on our level and we do get many all-state and higher caliber athletes that play on our level. I think many players decide to go with bigger scholarships with a higher status at first then later decide that playing and graduating becomes a higher priority. I can't tell you how many players that NCAA Division II, III and NAIA schools end up connecting with from Division I schools trying to find another situation. The key word is PLAYING because only a few really get to play Division I basketball vs. suiting up on the team.

HCH: Finally, the question that I like to ask all the college coaches we interview: What qualities do you look for in a player that you recruit to become a Runnin' Eagle and probably indicate to you that the said player has been well-coached?

JS: I think for us the first step is to recruit the right person for Central Methodist University and one that would benefit from their education at CMU. It is most important that the individual feels happy and content with their college decision. A person that feels good and is happy becomes a successful student athlete by working hard and dedicating themselves to the goals and tasks at hand. Having the major that an individual is interested in is a start and making sure that individual fits in with our community and program is vital to the success of the student and our program. With this in mind, here are some basketball observations.

When he evaluate players for our program we look at many factors I guess the obvious would be overall raw talent, however, if it were that simple everyone would have great teams. It takes a lot more than individual talent to be successful in college basketball. Remember, it is a team game so with that in mind we look at the qualities that we expect are players to uphold to a high level to help achieve overall team success. Some of the things we look for when we watch recruits play during the season would be include: How do they interact with their teammates and coach? How do they act when they have someone subbing for them in a game? How do they act when an official makes a call against them? Do they acknowledge their teammates for things such as an assist or helping out on defense? Do they cheer for their teammates while on the bench? Do they pick up their teammates when things are going bad? What is their body language like? Do they have the ability to make players around them better? What type of leader can they be? And on and on and on...

I would also like to be honest and say that the obvious factors still apply. If you can shoot lights out and/or defend and rebound, there will always be a spot on most teams for you. I like players that can go both right and left and can use either hand. I stress the importance on the simple things like passing and catching the ball. I like players that have a nice shooting form. These players seem to play with a lot more consistency. Team chemistry is our most important factor in achieving team success. It would be very difficult for us to rely on individual talent. So, with this in mind, players that play in this type of system have a step up on becoming successful.

MISSOURI BASKETBALL COACHES ASSOCIATION
March 10 & 17, 2007 Board Meeting Minutes

1. Meeting called to order at 9:15 AM by President Blossom.
2. Minutes of October 19 & 20, 2006 handed out. These had been previously approved.
3. The Treasurer's report was handed out and discussed. Gail Jones made the motion to accept the report. Ryan Shaw second. Passed.
4. MSHSAA representatives Kermit Erhahn, Executive Director & Kevin Garner, Assistant Director addressed the Board.
 - A. They emphasized the need to take your concerns to the Basketball Advisory Committee. This included location of State Play Off sites and other ideas to improve the tournament.
 - B. They mentioned the fact that three officials were used in most of the State Tournament competition.
 - C. The Public/Private proposal will be on the ballot this spring.
 - D. The idea of a Jamboree was mentioned, but a decision has not been made.
 - E. They were asked about the idea of having the MBCA Academic All State Recognition at the State Tournament. Executive Erhahn thought it would be a good idea.
 - F. They emphasized that any ideas brought before the Advisory Committee should be thought out and a plan of implementation should be included.
5. President Blossom presented a plan to compensate the Executive Secretary. This plan was approved by the MBCA Officers and presented to the Board. It called for the Executive Secretary to received $8000.00 per year in monthly amounts and $3000.00 maximum in expenses each year. In addition the Executive Secretary shall hire a person to assist in the management of the Association. This agreement to be finalized by President Blossom and the Executive Secretary. David Fox made the motion to accept this plan. Sean Williamson second. Passed
6. The suggestion was made to honor the MBCA Academic All State Teams at the Appropriate State tournament along with the Coaches who have reached certain milestones in their careers. The Coaches of the Year will be honored at the Clinic.
7. David Fox, Clinic Chair reported on the October Coaching Clinic held at Columbia College. He mentioned that it went well, but would like suggestions to improve. It was a financial success, with profit right at $20,000.00. There will be a clinic committee meeting at 11:00 AM on Sunday April 15, 2007 prior to the MBCA Academic All State Banquet at the Reynolds Alumni Center on the campus of the University of Missouri in Columbia. It was mentioned that Board members should make every effort to attend. David mentioned that Special Olympic Missouri Coaches will be ask to join MBCA. A letter from Special Olympic President and CEO Mark Musso was received commending MBCA for our support of their program.
8. MBCA All-State Selection C0-Chairs Shawn Erickson and Jim Vaughan made Their report with the following suggestions.
 - A. Coaches are needed in each of the District meeting to see that All District teams are selected. MBCA must be more involved.

- B. The MBCA All State Committees for Class 4 & 5 will meet today at 11:00 To select the teams.
- 9. Hall of Fame Games were discussed. Secretary Filbert reported on a meeting at the MO Sports Hall of Fame on March 6, 2007.
 - A. Attending the meeting were Jerald Andrews, Marty Walladsen and Andrea Porter of the Hall and Sean Williamson and Filbert of MBCA. The four games will be played on June 1, 2007 at Drury University. These decisions were made primarily because of financial reasons. There is not a sponsor at this point and Drury University is not charging us for the use of their facilities. Denny Hunt and Ryan Shaw stated their objections to playing at Drury, the number of games and the date. These objections were noted.
 - B. It was mentioned that the games needed more and better promotions to truly make it a statewide event. President Blossom mentioned that the games received little or no coverage in St. Louis.
- 10. MBCA Academic All State lists were handed out for Girl's and Boy's teams
 - A. Secretary Filbert ask for recommendations as to the best players on the list these players receive a $500.00 Scholarship presented by the Show=Me State Games.
 - B. The Banquet will be Sunday April 15, 2007 at the Reynolds Center on the University of Missouri Campus in Columbia. MSHSAA Executive Director Urhahn will be the speaker.
- 11. The Richard Fairchild Coach of the Year selections was made and the policy of selecting the winners of the State Tournament, who are MBCA members were followed. Class 4 Girls=Brett Goodwin; St. Joseph Benton; Class 4 Boys=Gerry Marlin Ruskin; Class 5 Girls=Brad Oyler Liberty; Class 5 Boys=Mark Nusbaum, Rockhurst.
- 12. Mr. & Miss Show-Me Basketball nominees and Mr. & Miss SOMO were mentioned. Secretary Filbert commented that the Show-Me winners were made by contacting anonymous College Assistant Coaches for their input.
- 13. MBCA Hall of Fame Enshrinement will be held on Friday June1, 2007 at the MO Sports Hall of Fame Building. Secretary Filbert ask that Coaches let him know about 500 win Coaches.
 - A. The John Lenox Memorial will be dedicated on the above date or at the Hall of Fame Basketball Luncheon in the Fall. The dedication was delayed because of the Ice storm which delayed construction in February.
- 14. Membership stands at 757. Shane Matzen reported that Certificates for All District player were available from his web site.
- 15. New Business
 - A. President-Elect Stephanie Philips serves on the National High School Rules Committee. She mentioned that if you have ideas about changes she will need them ASAP, The meeting is in April 2007.
- 16. Meeting adjourned at 10:50AM

March 17, 2007 MBCA Board Meeting

1. Meeting called to order at 9:00 by President Blossom.
2. MSHSAA Executive Director Kerwin Erhahn and Assistant Director Kevin Garner addressed the board.
 - A. Use the Advisory Committee to get your ideas to the state association (MBCA board members Shane Matzen and Craig Parra serve on the MSHSAA Advisory Committee)
 - B. Talk to your Principal's and Superintendents about your concerns. They are the ones who vote.
 - C. The New MSHSAA Web Site will be up in April. Stay in touch thru the Internet. Get information direct.
 - D. Attendance at the 4& 5 Tournament was up in 2007. Attendance at 1,2,3 was average or a little above in 2007.
 - E. Private Schools met with MSHSAA on 3/6/07

LIZ LOST ~~109~~ lbs

"My name is Liz Dale. Along with a group of co-workers, we signed up for the Shape Up Missouri.

To date, I have lost 109 pounds: I couldn't have done it without my support system at work.

This has probably been the best experience I have had at weight loss. The newsletters we received had good information and recipes that I found helpful.

The big picture is very simple; you have to change the way and amount you eat and you have to get moving.

You have to do it for yourself first and then for your family."

Keeping a Good Thing Going

Shane Matzen

Hard Court Herald Editor

Few of us in the high school coaching ranks have had the fortune of going through the recruiting process of the blue-chip, Division I prospect. Most of us though, at one time or another, are going to have on our rosters players who have the ability to continue their careers at one level or another of college basketball. While the upper-echelon NCAA programs have the mechanisms in place to find the best players, many of the so-called “minor” programs do not. They lack the manpower and/or monetary resources to find each and every player that might be a fit for them. It is my belief that we as high school coaches have an obligation to be the bridge between these programs and most importantly, our players.

It has been my experience as an assistant coach at the small college level and a head coach at both the Class 2 and 5 levels that often times, the out-state player is surprisingly more accessible to smaller colleges and more eager to join them. Growing up and coaching in smaller towns previously, I’ve been able to witness local newspapers, radio stations and TV crews cover the heroics of the local star or the small college down the road. In the St. Louis metro area, two things have been apparent to me: 1) Local media has so much to do with following professional and major college sports that only the premiere high school players are consistently recognized and given attention. 2) Players in the metro area are so bombarded with news of Division I colleges that they aren’t even aware that a great brand of basketball is played at the Division II, III, NAIA and junior college (not to mention that a large percentage of these same schools conduct JV programs as well). Thus, I think these two occurrences bring me back to the original thrust of this article. If we have players who can continue to play basketball and enjoy the sport after high school, we have to bring their names and abilities to the attention of these schools that for whatever reason have no idea our players exist.

How to bridge this gap? I’m sure that other coaches have come up with ways to market their players. Phone calls and video footage mailed to the college are always great ways to go. To jump-start the process, I take an idea that we used at Central Methodist a step further. Most high school coaches are aware of the form letters and postage-paid cards that we’re asked to send back to schools on the look-out for our talent. These are very good ways to get our kids’ names on schools’ mailing lists. However, I like to add a much more personal touch when sending my players’ information off to schools. While I try and save my school district postage by using the pre-paid envelopes, I always type up a player bio page to insure that the college coach has something different on his desk that will stand out and hopefully encourage him to take the time to peruse. At the end of this article, I have placed two samples (without personal information on either player) that Jason Wolfard of Lindbergh and I have sent out in the past to give you an idea of what I’m talking about.

Obviously before sending anything out, I try and sit down with my player and their parents to get a handle on what level I think he is capable of playing at. This may be a sticky situation for some coaches who are dealing with kids and parents who may have unrealistic expectations. However, I think it is imperative for you as a coach and for your future prospects to keep an honest appraisal of the situation. As a former college assistant, I know there was nothing more frustrating than having a high school coach call and extol the virtues of his player only to get him on campus for a visit and a chance to play with our returnees and find out he couldn't make a left-handed lay-up. Needless to say, the next season we took the same coach's phone call with a huge lump of salt (though maybe he DID have a great player that season). Lastly, as it pertains to this point of the article, be an advocate for your player and his parents. I can remember receiving highlight videos of players sent from his home address and receiving phone calls from the parents. It often made me wonder if the kid was any good if the coach himself wasn't involved to give his opinion and/or recommendations.

Lastly, I've taken away one major excuse for you to tackle this whole process: where do I begin? At the end of this article, I've placed the aforementioned recommendation pages. Take these as a template for your own players, use bits and pieces, or better yet improve on it and return it to me so I can better help my players! There is also a list of every non-Division I basketball school in the state with their mailing address and school phone number. If you have additions or corrections to this list, please send those to me as well.

It is my sincere belief that we have a lot of great players in our state who have the ability to continue to participate and enjoy this great game of ours on a competitive level. Let's do our best as coaches to help them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A hearty congratulations to our own associate editor of the Hard Court Herald, Jason Wolfard of Lindbergh High School. Jason took a gritty squad of kids he'd groomed and cultivated over the past few years to the Final Four of this past March's MSHSAA Class 5 tournament. I have placed his article in this edition of the newsletter as the lead-off item as he gives his point of view on the experience to hopefully help all of us pursue the dream to reach Columbia.

Also, we have included in this edition of the newsletter a lengthy list of our first attempt to honor our state's players at the district tournament level (see the end of the newsletter). Districts that have no players or coaches listed either...A) had a tournament director who did not forward the nomination info to his/her coaches or B) the district coaches elected not to participate. It is my sincere hope that a year from now we will be able to list an all-district team for EVERY district held around the state. We also have an all-district selection certificate available for your player(s) who were so honored. Send me an e-mail requesting a copy to: hardcourtherald@hotmail.com

COACH'S COMMENTS: _____ might be what some would call a "diamond in the rough". As he has reached this, his senior year, he has attracted more and more interest from schools ranging from NAIA all the way to Division II. He is very strong and aggressive, yet with a comprehensive weight program in a college environment, could become one of the strongest players in whichever college league he winds up in. He is a presence on the defensive end and has developed some very good moves around the bucket, though has many more left to go. In addition, his greatest attribute might be his ability to run the floor. With our guard position upgraded this season from last, he has been able to take advantage by finishing on the break for us numerous times already this season. He was voted a member of our all-conference squad a year ago and no doubt will end up on it again this season.

_____ has been one a unique player for me. He's not your typical high school student/athlete who comes to practice every day, does his thing and that's the end of his concern for the program. He is a hard-working young man who I have grown to know that cares deeply for the welfare of his teammates and coaches. He wants the best for himself, but shares in the joys and sorrows that all that surround him go through. As I have realized this about him, I have found myself leaning more and more on him as a leader for our team and an advocate for myself. I believe you will find the same thing if given an opportunity in your program. Please don't hesitate to contact me through any of the avenues on this letterhead or call me at my home (- -). Thank you for your time and consideration of _____.

_____ is the kind of kid that every coach dreams of having on their team. He leads by example day in and day out; in practice and in games; on the court and off the court! He has solid fundamentals and range outside the three point line. Playing a majority of the game, he rarely gets fatigued and you can always bet you will get all of his effort every play of the game. His height doesn't keep him from banging with the big boys down low, yet he also has the ability to guard perimeter players. He was second in the conference in rebounding this year. _____ can also score in many different ways – post moves, short jumpers, off the dribble, and from outside of the three point line. _____ excels as a three sport athlete as he is the quarterback for football and plays first base on the baseball team. Without any hesitation, I can say that _____ has been my favorite player to coach as long as I have been in this career.

I have several teams already signed up....limited spots left.

LADY BULLDOGS SUMMER SHOOTOUT

The Trenton High School coaching staff will be hosting a shootout on July 20th and July 21st. We are looking for interested teams to participate. Our facilities will be air-conditioned. We will provide quality officiating. Every participating team will get four games. Trenton is a town of 6,000 and has plenty of places to eat lunch... Each participant will get a pass to our new aquatic center to cool off after a hard days work. Our new basketball coach at North Central Missouri College (finished 6th at the national tournament) will be on hand to scout local talent. The cost will be $125.00. For more information contact Quentin Albrecht at home (660-339-7315) or at school (660-359-2291). My e-mail is galbrecht@trentonr9.k12.mo.us. We will take the first 10 teams.

Congratulations to the 2007 Mr. & Miss Show-Me
Basketball Award Winners
