It's Been Great

By Shane Matzen

Hard Court Herald Editor

Marquette High School

"Vote for me and your wildest dreams will come true."

-----Pedro Sanchez

I don't remember punching the tab for Napoleon Dynamite's high school presidential nominee but I must have at some time because his promise really came to fruition for me. As most of you know, I was privileged to be selected for the position of activities director at my school, Marquette High, beginning in the 2013-2014 school year and to fill in the substantial shoes of our award-winning AD, Mark Linneman. As you can imagine, I am excited about the great challenge of trying to organize and lead our program at our great school at MHS. But the thrust of this, my last edition of the Hard Court Herald as its editor, is to help all of you reading this to realize how great this profession of coaching basketball really is.

I had always liked playing sports growing up but never gave coaching much thought until my eighth grade coach at Eldon Junior High, past MBCA president Cloyce Klein, gave us boys the chance to coach the sixth graders participating in his intramural program. For the next five years, once our seasons had ended, I kept coming back and doing the same for Coach Klein and found I loved watching young players have some success with a little bit of help from me. It's for that reason that I thought it appropriate that I go back and ask my hometown coach to be my last "Q & A With the Difference-Makers" subject because of the significant difference he made for me.

We all have our inspirations as we go through the ranks. The names for me included Klein, Byland, Youmans, Cochran, Stewart, Sundvold, Daly, Draper, Anderson, Sherman, Creech, Pattillo, Proffer, Schweain, Hoffman, Schultz and many more who I didn't have the chance to work directly for or with for as long a period of time as I did these gentlemen I named here. The peer group that we have been blessed to gain almost immediate rank into upon our first win, loss, technical, parent run-in, tournament title, excruciatingly-bad decision made, player who comes back to tell you how important you were to them and the list goes on and on and on is one that ranks right up there as one of the two most important things I am going to miss about being the coach of the Mustangs. No matter how hard we competed with or against each other, the men that I was fortunate enough to coach with or against were always there for me and I hope that they can say the same about me. It's a special group and as with all things in life, those times with these people closest to you aren't always rosy. But follow a rule that applies to all things in life as well: forgive, forget, move on and treasure the time you have to be a member of this fraternity.

The other thing I will miss is an obvious one: the players. I've said it on more than one occasion over this past decade I've been able to write to you...what a wonderful gift these young men and women give us by simply giving us everything they've got and often times more just simply because we ask them to. I have hugged, screamed at, laughed with, lost my cool with and cried with all of them. But they kept coming back and giving me what I always told them I'd only ask for: their best. I'm on page two of this last article as editor but this could turn in to a ten page article for me if I went down the road of talking about memories with my players. (But I know you the reader would probably enjoy that about as much as when someone pulls out pictures of their kids!) Safe to say though, most of you understand where I'm coming from. Those players we coach are EVERYTHING.

I would like to mention, most importantly as it applies to this association, someone who is no longer with us in body but is in spirit. Gary Filbert, the founder of the MBCA, showed me what it meant to be a strong leader who didn't have to hit you over the head with a stick to prove it. I still sometimes grin to myself as I've typed these newsletters out over the years how he dangled this carrot of being the editor of a publication that he published for over 15 years and made it seem like the opportunity of a lifetime. The pay is not good and often times the responsibility of putting it together came at what was probably the worst time of year for me to be working on something not school-related. But you know what? It really WAS the opportunity of a lifetime. To have a voice directed to a sport and a state that I grew up thinking was everything has been a responsibility that I have taken very seriously and have been very proud to say I've done. Thank you, Coach Filbert, for believing in me and letting me do something that I've loved.

In closing, Jason Wolfard will be taking over these duties and as most of you know, he has worked off and on for this newsletter for several years. He will be GREAT. One of the hardest-working guys in our business, he has gone above and beyond with his program at Lindbergh High to make it more than just functioning solely as a basketball team. I am looking forward to seeing his product next fall.

As you know, the position of AD means I'm not going away, just dealing with a different set of issues. I hope to keep in touch with many of you in the future and as I stated to the board at our March meeting, anytime the MBCA or anyone in this association would ever need or want to ask for my services, I will be there at the drop of the hat. Thanks to all of you who have read the Hard Court Herald. It was an honor to be your editor.

Q & A With the Difference-Makers

CLOYCE KLEIN
Eldon School District

Coach Cloyce Klein has served student-athletes in the Central Missouri area in a significant way ever since the mid-1970s. He has taught at all three levels of the public school systems and coached basketball, football and track successfully at both the California and the Eldon School Districts and currently serves in a part-time, semi-retired role as the middle school athletic director for Eldon. Coach Klein counts his wife of 38 years, Lora, as a huge factor in allowing him to pursue his career in high school sports and couldn't be prouder of his children, Melissa and Matt and also the three grandchildren, Joscelynn & Evie Marriott and Justin Klein.

HARD COURT HERALD: As you look back on your career, what stands out as highlights for you as a coach on-the-floor/field-wise?

CLOYCE KLEIN: In football, getting that first district championship, then getting a few more. In basketball, it was when I first started at the junior high level being able to teach the fundamentals and over time see that carry over with the players as they played in high school and won tournaments, district titles and even played in the state championship game. When I moved to the high school level, it was winning the conference, playing for tournament titles and district championships. It was having that special team that went 23-3 before losing in overtime for the district championship. I received a few awards during those years, conference and district coach of the year but most of all, it was because of the special players I had.

In track, we were able to win six conference titles in 10 years, five times district runners-up and finish in the top 10 of the coaches' poll a couple of times. Seeing the athletes at the state meets win a medal was a highlight. Also, having an Olympic silver medalist wasn't bad either.

HCH: Same vein as the first question, what things do you look back on fondly that you experienced or achieved off the floor or field?

CC: I have met many coaches and media personnel in my tenure as a coach and many have become my friends. I have been fortunate to see many of my players go to college to play and others become coaches. I had the privilege to serve as president of the Missouri Basketball Coaches Association in 2001-2002 and got to know a legend in Missouri basketball in Gary Filbert.

My brother, Rodney student taught under me and helped me coach the sixth grade team that would later go on to play in the state championship game. Rodney became the head girls basketball coach in Ozark and was a two-time coach of the year there. I lost him a few years ago to ALS.

As a coach, my children lived in the gym and on the field. They turned out alright-one married a coach and the other could became a coach. Dad could not be prouder.

Last, I want to thank the coaches who helped me along the way and those who were my assistants. I tried to learn from them all.

HCH: A lot of people ask so we will here as well: what was Christian Cantwell (Olympic shot-putter from Eldon, MO who played for Coach Klein) like for you to coach and what stood out to you about him that you thought might make him great?

CC: Christian was a good-sized young man when he came to high school. He loved the weight room and just stayed in there and got stronger and stronger. I needed some throwers for the track team and I knew Christian could help us. I had to convince him that he could lift weights and do track. Lucky for me he had a buddy that I also recruited. His friend also medaled at State so we had a real one-two punch. Christian wasn't really interested in track until he began beating upper-classmen in the district meet. It was then that he became very focused.

Christian was an easy going, laid-back athlete. I would be looking for him and he would be up by the discus leaning against a truck eating a whole pie his mom had baked. One thing he enjoyed as much as competing was eating. He had a great sense of humor and was easy to coach. Christian was very quick for his size as well and was as big as any D-1 athlete you'd see. He would have made a great college center and deep-snapper in football. He was my post player in basketball and finished his senior season with our team having one of the best records in Eldon's history. When he got to Mizzou, the coach there made him the track athlete that he has become today. I read an article one time that his basketball coach was the track coach and made him go out for track and he had to obey. I just encouraged him a great deal and I'm glad I did.

HCH: As a former player of yours, you know how much I enjoy coming back to see you and get your take on things I've gone through and I KNOW I'm not your only former player that does that with you. For our younger coaches, what is that part of coaching like as it relates to having your old players still rely on you and what does it mean to you?

CC: Living in Eldon for so many years, I get to see many of my former athletes on a daily basis. Some are teachers or coaches in the district. Matt Davis, our superintendent, is a former middle school and high school basketball player of mine. Working now as part-time AD in the middle school, I see many parents who were my students. That comes in handy when I sub for the principal. It is quite rewarding to talk to them about old times or they tell me things they remember I said or did. I just smile because many times the memory is just not quite like it really happened. It is always good to see their faces and listen to the old stories though. It means it meant something to them and they still carry those memories with them.

I always considered the title of Coach to mean something important. I never took it for granted. I believe you have to earn the title and it brings a good feeling to this old coach when those players or students, some in their 50s, still call me "Coach".

SUGGESTED READING

(courtesy of BarnesandNoble.com) Norman Vincent Peale's The Power of Positive Thinking, a classic bestseller, has inspired an optimistic perspective for millions of Americans. Now, in an inspirational and entertaining rebuttal, the legendary basketball coach Bob Knight explains why "negative thinking" will actually produce more positive results, in sports and in daily life. Coach Knight, the second-winningest coach in NCAA history with 902 victories, explains that victory is often attained by the team that makes the fewest mistakes. His coaching philosophy was to instill discipline by "preparing to win" rather than hoping to win. That meant understanding the downside and drilling his teams to prevent the things that could go wrong. And when his teams did win, he made sure they didn't dwell on their success, but rather looked immediately to the challenges of the next game. He applies this lesson to business strategy as well.

SUGGESTED WEB BOOKMARK

www.mobca.org

The revamped web-site of our own Missouri Basketball Coaches Association is worth another visit as webmaster Bill Gunn, of Kirkwood High School, has modernized and updated the entire lay-out. It truly is THE resource for Missouri's hoops coaches!

PLAY OF THE DAY

X (vs zone)

05-11-2007

Frame A

1 dribbles out to the right while 2 comes off 4's screen of the zone middle man. If 2 is open, 1 can hit him for the shot.

Frame B

If 2 or 1 don't have a look at the basket, 5 screens the low man on the zone for 3 to dive down for what should be an easy post-pass.

General Comments

This is a great play to run against a zone given the many options you have no matter how the defense wants to defend it.
